

recommendations to which specific objection is made. United States v. Raddatz, 447 U.S. 667 (1980). The court need not consider any nonspecific objections or any frivolous or conclusory objections. Battle v. United States Parole Comm'n, 834 F.2d 419, 421 (5th Cir. 1987).

Johnson objects to the magistrate judge's conclusion that he is not entitled to federal habeas relief on the basis of his claim that his right to a speedy trial was violated. The basis of Johnson's objection is that the magistrate judge and the state courts gave too much weight to Johnson's conduct while balancing the factors relevant to whether his right to a speedy trial had been violated. Having reviewed this claim, the court concludes that Johnson has failed to show that the state court's decision was unreasonable.

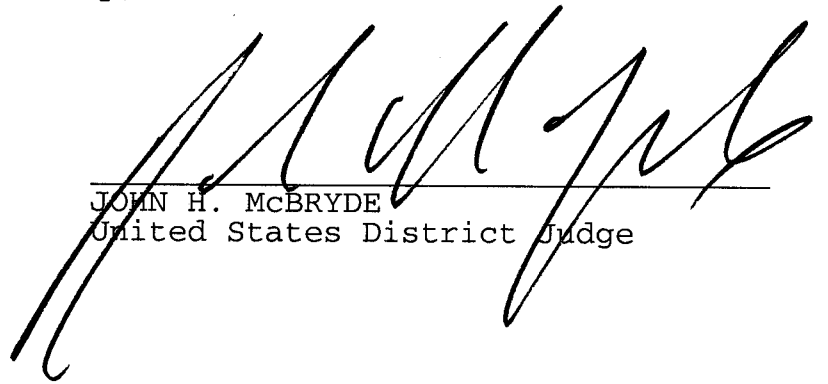

Johnson also disagrees with the magistrate judge's conclusion that the state court's retroactive adjudication of his competency was not an unreasonable application of clearly established federal law. Having reviewed the record, the court is satisfied that this objection is without merit.

Therefore,

The court accepts the findings, conclusions, and recommendation of the magistrate judge and ORDERS that the Johnson's application for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28

U.S.C. § 2254 be, and is hereby, denied.
